Beautiful Enemy*
by John Johnson

Verse:

1st voice:

You're so beautiful, radiant and blessed
When you exit your condo, you're impeccably dressed
A diamond in your nostril, a curl on your brow
Everything is yesterday, only you are in the now

2nd voice:

You sneer at the homeless, kick sand at skinny guys
Cheat at gin rummy, tell transparent lies
Burn infinite bridges, that you never can mend
You suck, you're a loser and you'll never be my friend

Verse:

1st voice:

You're so wonderful, have a car from Germany
When you enter the daylight, clouds begin to flee
You've got lots of money, you buy trumpets and pearls
Gave your name to a mountain, you're the center of your world

2nd voice:

You cut down rain forests, and kill baby seals
Never call your mother, welcome all that you can steal
You smile while others suffer, from the horror that you send
You suck, you're a loser and you'll never be my friend

Verse:

1st voice:

You're so delightful, you wear designer clothes
Rub lotions on your body, smell of jasmine and rose
Braid your hair at the seashore, on an island near Spain
You wave from your villa, but you can't recall my name

2nd voice:

You throw garbage out the window to distribute your disease
Have twenty bastard children, that you have never seen
You toy with your victims, just to see their pain again
You suck, you're a loser and you'll never be my friend

2nd voice:

Your so beautiful

1st voice:

And you'll never be my friend

* Duet from opposite perspectives.
