You know that I'm right
by John Johnson

Verse:

Snail shells crunching on the ground
Walk soft so you don't make a sound
Something comes that hungers for your dreams
Speak son and tell us where you've been
You can't talk that way to me
We don't care what you say just stay where you're seen
I don't need your advice and I'm needing it less
It's been forty years or more since I've been drinkin' from a breast
I see eyes in the shadows that are watching me at night
And you can't say anything cause you know that I'm right
You know that I'm right
You know that I'm right

Other worlds sifting through the sand
We'll have it all when we reach land
Don't talk about that now the baby's asleep
Dim light over the door
You can't enter here no more
Come back when you look a little more like me
Greedy pilgrims landing on the shore
Take what i got but you always want more
You can only eat here if you're old and you're white
And you know that it's wrong and you know that I'm right
You know that I'm right
You know that I'm right

The last prince clinging to the throne
Say that you love me when i know you don't
A leaf, the earth & the stars, they all got needs
Kill the witch and bless our home
You can't sing, you don't know the song
Follow me children and pretend that you believe
There's just one difference between the high and the low
One has money and the other one don't
You can hide all the pleasures just out of my sight
But i know that it's there and you know that I'm right
You know that I'm right
You know that I'm right
